Background: PBCC Professor Lori Crane got the idea to help the children after she and Professor Tom Steffen, DBA, returned from a trip to Panama where they viewed an eclipse. While in Panama, they worked with three area elementary schools, teaching the children about eclipses and the sun, moon and earth connection. During the visit, the professors learned the plight and needs of one particular school, Santa Clara Elementary, through an American couple, Dennis and Sheila Walker, whom the professors lived with in Panama. The Walkers have become the school’s guardian angels. They also have set up a program to distribute needed supplies to the school: Escuela Santa Clara. They also have set up a program to distribute needed supplies to the school: Escuela Santa Clara. Touched by the situation, Crane asked Marie Reddy, a FACC community service coordinator, if FACC could help.
